Auburn Student Invited to Speak at NAWIC

Release Date: 9/15/2011

Auburn Career Center is proud to announce that Jordyn Seredich has been invited to speak at the National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC) Annual Installation Ceremony on Thursday, September 15th.

Jordyn is a senior in Auburn's Architecture and Project Management class from Chardon High School. Over the summer, Jordyn attended NAWIC's MAGIC Camp. MAGIC stands for Mentoring a Girl in Construction and there are two overall goals in holding a MAGIC Camp; the first being to show girls that women can learn about and find jobs in the Construction Industry. The second is to inspire girls by showing them that they can work with tools and do work in what is considered a man-dominant trade.

Amy Hewis, the Immediate Past President of NAWIC, provided the following information: On Thursday, September 15th, NAWIC will be hosting its Annual Installation Ceremony for the incoming Board & Officers and Jordyn Seredich has been invited to attend to represent the eight participants who attended MAGIC Camp. Jordyn will be asked to share a few words on her experience at MAGIC Camp and talk about some of her favorite highlights. She was definitely the best candidate to do so as she truly embodies a young woman who was excited to attend Camp and who was eager to learn more about Construction and how she could someday be a part of it. In her application for MAGIC, she wrote that she expected it to be "the highlight of her summer," ... little does she know that her attendance was actually a highlight for the NAWIC members who were involved. She was an absolutely great Camper in every respect!

Auburn's mission is to guarantee that all students Empower themselves, Excel in the emerging workplace, and Enrich their community. Jordyn exudes these values by her initiative and passion in her Architecture and Project Management class at Auburn.
